The first Dissenter admitted to the degree of B.A. Adm. at the Inner Temple, Nov. 8, 1852. Called to the Bar, Jan. 26, 1856, but did not practise. Made five voyages to the Arctic regions; the most important were the last two in the Eira, which he had built at Peterhead. Discovered the S.W. coast of Franz-Josef Land and a navigable route to that territory, 1880. In 1881 the ship was crushed by ice and her company built a hut (which many years later Nansen found standing). With sails made of tablecloths, and after a journey of many weeks, they fell in with a Dutch exploration ship. He would not read his papers at the R.G.S. meetings, and in consequence of his retiring disposition, his voyages are less well-known than they deserve. Some account of them is given in Arctic Exploration by Douglas Hoare. The R.G.S. states 'the voyage of the Eira must be pronounced to have been the most important summer cruise that has ever been taken in the Arctic regions. Mr Leigh Smith's discoveries will form a fresh starting-point for future Polar discovery.' A cape in Spitzbergen is named after him. Married, 1887, Miss Charlotte Sellers, and had issue two sons. Died Jan. 4, 1913. For an eloquent tribute to him see Polar Exploration, by W. S. Brice. Father of Lionel L. (1891).
